WIKILAB

A laboratory of co-creation and collaborative practices. Our I+D+i unit, our space for ideation, experimentation, and prototyping. We operate as a learning community and a community of practice. Our research is based on collective intelligence, a mix of diverse knowledge, and applied creativity. We systematize and share the knowledge created in free and open innovation, so that it is easy to use and adapt, both within the Wikitoki community and externally.

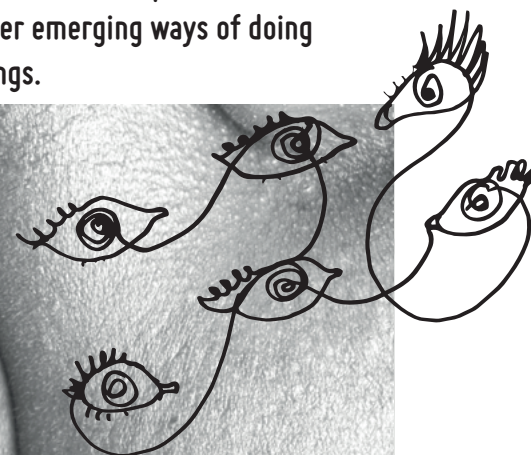

WIKESSE

Portfolio of services to develop projects with clients who also seek to facilitate positive change with their actions. Our offer combines the skills and knowledge of the members of our community. Although each project is different, how we do things is nourished by participation and co-creation, facilitation and accompaniment, community culture, feminisms, ecology, solidarity, and transformative economy or citizen innovation.

WIKIARE

The network of affinity, representation and collective dialogue that allows us to open, diversify and extend the Wikitoki community to other nearby agents with similar or complementary interests. Its members are: people and entities which, without being an active part of the community, maintain a formal link; projects to which we offer support and resources; and other associations or networks we are part of. It is a way to give visibility, articulate, and advocate for the enhancement of collaborative practices and other emerging ways of doing things.
